Erynne Jones is a Senior Policy Consultant with Harbage Consulting. She is currently playing a key role on the firm's behavioral health integration team, working on multiple projects designed to promote integration at the local level across California. Prior to joining Harbage in 2015, Erynne served as the associate director of policy at the California Primary Care Association (CPCA) in Sacramento, where she provided content expertise, state and federal advocacy, and strategic analysis for policy issues pertaining to care integration across the health care system on behalf of more than 1,000 community clinics and health center sites across California.

Erynne has worked on a variety of projects across the health care system, with a focus on prevention, quality improvement, integrated care, and health equity. Her professional experience includes creating a quality improvement (QI) program as part of the QI team at the UCLA Arthur Ashe Student Health and Wellness Center; developing recommendations for county programs improving health care delivery within county jails as a graduate intern with the Department of Health Care Services' inmate eligibility unit as part of the California Medicaid Research Institute's Internship Program; and building and managing an award-winning employee wellness program for the National University System.

Additionally, Erynne worked as adjunct staff with Rand, Inc. on the M-TEENS: Military Teenagers' Environments, Exercise, and Nutrition Study (a longitudinal study on childhood obesity at military bases), as a staff research associate conducting international and community-based research at the Semel Institute for Neuroscience and Human Behavior's Center for Community Health, and as an independent contractor providing policy expertise for clients including Kaiser Permanente, Parero Design, and Cal State Los Angeles. During graduate school, she also volunteered with former Assembly Member Julia Brownley's District Office as a policy analyst. Erynne was the first recipient of the Brown Social Justice Award at UCLA, a Regents Scholar, a member of the UCLA Student Health Advisory Committee, and a Winston Health Policy Scholar. She is a member of the Delta Omega Honorary Society in Public Health.

Erynne received a B.A. in international affairs with honors from The George Washington University and an MPH from the University of California-Los Angeles. Outside of her work at Harbage Consulting, she is an avid runner, backpacker, soccer player, and world traveler.
