Chelsea Ji provides research, analysis, and foundational support to the Strategic Communications and Public Affairs team, working with clients driving meaningful system change in health care.

As a recent graduate, Chelsea gained an interest in health care through various student organizations and personal experiences navigating the health care system. She previously worked on preventative medicine research with the Veterans Affairs Health System of Loma Linda, where she was involved with patient experience quality improvement and preventative health classes.

Chelsea graduated from University of California, Berkeley with a Bachelor of Arts in Integrative Biology. When she's not in the office, she enjoys baking, learning to watercolor, and exploring new places.
