Terrance Henson serves as an Outreach Specialist in Los Angeles County, providing education and outreach to stakeholders of the Coordinated Care Initiative and the Cal MediConnect program.

Before joining Harbage, Terrance worked for Molina Healthcare of California as Manager of Long-Term Services and Supports (LTSS). In this role, he provided oversight of the integration of LTSS as a managed care benefit in Los Angeles, Riverside, San Bernardino and San Diego counties.

Prior to his tenure at Molina Healthcare, Terrance spent time as a residential aide for children and adolescents and worked as a systems change advocate for Independent Living Centers in Los Angeles. It was in his role at the ILC that he developed a passion for speaking up for those who could not speak for themselves.

Terrance also has experience implementing the Olmstead Decision, working on the California Community Transition Program to help able and willing beneficiaries move from nursing care and long-term care back into the community.

Terrance holds an undergraduate degree in sociology from the University of California Riverside. And while his roles and responsibilities have changed throughout his career, he has remained dedicated to eliminating barriers and improving access to health care and all basic human rights for all people.
